

Dear Faculty, Staff, and Students,

NSU is aware of the challenges facing the student population and is committed to implementing mental health prevention efforts throughout the university. The NSU Office of Suicide & Violence Prevention provides in-person trainings for students, faculty, and staff to educate the university on suicide and violence prevention and create a university-wide safety net. In addition to suicide prevention, we provide presentations on stress management, test taking skills, relaxation techniques, or other topics relevant to the audience.

Though we have been successful in reaching many NSU students, faculty, and staff, we have yet to reach many. Our goal is to provide trainings for each department and organization on an annual basis. The presentations can be requested by any group at NSU. This includes student groups, classes, and departments. We ask that you please request a training presentation for your group via our website: http://www.nova.edu/suicideprevention/presentation_requests.html

Take advantage of this valuable opportunity by making your request today!

Please also peruse the many resources we have available specific to students, campus professionals, and parents on our website: <http://www.nova.edu/suicideprevention>

We look forward to hearing from you!

Sincerely,

The Office of Suicide and Violence Prevention
